Message from the Executive Director Dr. Ardavan Eizadirad and Founding Director Devon Jones

It has been a busy year at YAAACE! We were able to secure and move into our new space at 45 Norfinch Drive in the Jane and Finch community. The classrooms have been customized and tailored to suit our needs and reflect the services and programs we continue to offer to students, families, and the larger community in a socio-culturally relevant and trauma-informed manner.

Our programs and services continued to expand after a return to in-person gathering was permitted by the provincial guidelines. We continued to offer our annual March Break camp, the Summer Institute, and the Community School Initiative focusing on academics, athletics, and expanded opportunities. We launched To Wards Peace and Peace Core New Narrative which focus on youth violence prevention and intervention using a community-driven public health approach. We have also entered numerous new partnerships with various stakeholders to strengthen our programs and services and ensure it remains affordable and accessible to the clients, students, and families we serve, predominantly racialized and Black. Lastly, we are doing the preparation work to launch the Centre for Community Safety and Roots of Violence to continue our work that aligns with YAAACE core values rooted in Awareness, Advocacy, Accountability, Action, and Access.

What has been made clear to us through the programs and services we offer are that students, clients, and families, particularly from racialized communities, need holistic supports to overcome the systemic inequities and barriers impacting them and where they live. We will continue to advocate for this! We highly encourage everyone to checkout our updated website (www.yaaace.com)to learn more about other programs and services that may support your needs. We look forward to passionately and collaboratively continuing to serve the community.

With love, respect, and gratitude.

Dr. Ardavan Eizadirad and Devon Jones

Focus group held with nine Grade 9 and 10 students

YAAACE is excited to be conducting a research project with Dr. Oyemolade Osibodu (York University) and Dr. Alexandre Cavalcante (University of Toronto) focusing on “Fostering Critical Financial Literacy with Black Youth”.

This project investigates perspectives of Black youth on financial literacy through learning about various social issues. The study will contribute knowledge to research in financial literacy and mathematics education as well as educational studies of race and racism.

Thanks for hosting our youth for a series of learning sessions filled with fun activities, brave conversations, and food. We look forward to the evidence-based research that comes from this.

November 1, 2023- Take Your Kids to Work Day for Grade 9 Students

On November 1, our Grade 9 student-athletes had a valuable opportunity to do their work placement at our YAAACE home base for Take Our Kids to Work Day. This nation-wide initiative provides youth with a first-hand experience of the world of work and allows them to consider future career plans, goals and endeavours. Our youth got a better understanding of the work YAAACE does in community, insight on the various roles and responsibilities that it takes to do the work, and learned the importance of strong work ethic, punctuality and responsibility. We provided our youth with a real-world, hands-on learning experience that goes beyond what they can learn in the classroom. They can see how the skills and knowledge they acquire in school are applied in the workplace. See short video posted on our social media platforms recapping the day: https://www.linkedin.com/posts/yaaace_on-november-1-our-grade-9-student-athletes-activity-7125972919989534721-ceht?utm_source=share&utm_medium=member_desktop

November 2023- Provided Input on Opportunities to Improve Outcomes for Emerging Adults who are Justice-Involved

As part of our ongoing work to improve adult correctional services across the province, the Ministry of the Solicitor General, in partnership with Ontario's Advocate for Community Opportunities (ACO), is seeking input on opportunities to improve outcomes for emerging adults (18–25-year-olds) who are justice-involved. For the purposes of these engagements, justice-involved is defined as contact or interaction with the criminal justice system. Given your organization's expertise and the important work you do within your communities, including with supporting emerging adults who are justice involved, the ministry would like to invite you to participate in three upcoming engagement sessions to seek your input. Each session will focus on one of three key themes related to improving outcomes for emerging justice-involved adults.

PUBLICATIONS AND KNOWLEDGE MOBILIZATION

Here are several publications by YAAACE that showcase the effectiveness of our programs and our efforts to drive policy change aimed at addressing systemic inequities and barriers, especially in racialized and low-income communities. We view research as a crucial tool for advocacy and activism, and we remain committed to leveraging the impact of our programs and services to mobilize knowledge.

Farewell to another school year. In Ontario, after a return to full activities with academics, clubs and teams after pandemic shutdowns, it seems that schools were constantly in the news for negative reasons.

 YAAACE is honored to have hosted Member of Parliament Marc Miller, Federal Minister of Immigration, Refugees and Citizenship, and local Member of Parliament for Humber River Black Creek Judy Sgro. We were able to share with them the impact of our annual programs using strength-based approaches in education, athletics, employment training, and violence prevention and intervention with a focus on accessibility and culturally reflective service delivery. We had rich discussions about how we can continue to enhance our programming to further support newcomer families and refugees as part of mitigating the opportunity gap and addressing larger systemic inequities in under-resourced communities.

December 13, 2023- Visit from the Department of Justice

YAAACE was honored to host the team from the Program Branch of the Department of Justice (Lisa, Victoria, and Harry). It was a great meeting where we discussed how we can support justice-involved youth through creating access to education, employment, case management, and culturally reflective wraparound supports. More importantly, we discussed how we can work together in partnerships with the school board towards creating prevention programs instead of purely focusing on intervention. We look forward to working together with multiple stakeholders to holistically support youth and families in vulnerable circumstances and create safer communities through effective programs and services.
